

Abstract of the Disclosure

A technique, specifically a method and apparatus that implements the method, that allows a memory to be located remotely from a video source. Specifically, the method provides a write control signal between a video source and a remote memory that allows the remote memory to provide a video image during slow-shutter operation of the camera.

00000000000000000000000000000000